Doug Sarno called the meeting to order at 6:07 PM.

The CAG used this session to discuss administrative issues, plan for activities in 2018, and orient new members to the CAG process.

General issues Raised

- CAG members discussed the challenges of floodplain properties whose owners choose not to accept clean up. The process being used to work with homeowners and the opportunity to pursue cleanup in the future were explained. It was discussed how some folks don't want it documented that there is dioxin on their property. The CAG has a role to play in communicating information and connecting people around this issue, but is not in a position to do more than that.
- Members requested development of an Acronym list to keep track of all the terms being used, will look to existing documents as a starting point.

CAG Technical Assistance

- The CAG reviewed the initial findings of the dioxin literature review being conducted under the TAP contract.
- CAG members were pleased to have the technical assistance folks on board.
- The initial document which just identified and described dioxin research projects over the past five years was dense and CAG members did not find that useful in its current form.
- The CAG is looking forward to a plain language executive summary which is under development.
- The CAG also identified the need for basic information on dioxin and its hazard to human health and the environment that they can share with neighbors when they ask about the project.
